Editor's Message:

Hi all,

Welcome to the new CEGC year of programs and meetings. Hope you all are enjoying the cooler weather as much as I am. It's wonderful to be able to dig and plant again, and I'm hoping to get some great deals on plants at the local nurseries as they wind down for the year. And of course I will also be planting bulbs from our Fall Bulb-a-Palooza when they arrive! I've included photos of a few of them to whet your appetite.

This year Ruby has some great speakers lined up for us. Dr. Linda Chalker-Scott will be joining us in a few days to talk about gardening in a changing climate. I just listened to a podcast of The Joe Gardener Show where she was busting garden myths, and I really liked her science-based approach to gardening and her easy speaking style. I will definitely be checking out more of her podcasts and her books. I think we are in for a treat on Monday evening.

Hope to see you all on Monday!

2021 Fall Bulb-a-Palooza

Yes! The club is conducting a bulb sale this Fall!

The proceeds from this sale support the Evening Garden Club's community gardening grants and horticulture scholarships

A preview catalog will be sent out soon, and the final catalog with new ONLINE ordering will come out around the end of October. We are delighted to include several brand new plant varieties in the sale alongside many stunning selections that are all new to our bulb sales, though not brand new to the industry.

Keep an eye out for the Trumpetvine bulb sale announcement. We'll have so many beautiful blooms to look forward to in spring!

Quilts in the Garden 2022

On June 18, 2022, Mary's River Quilt Guild in Philomath is planning a fundraising tour featuring Corvallis based gardens displaying quilts and wall hangings made by members. All of the gardens are in the SE part of Corvallis within walking distance of each other and include the gardens of Janet Magedanz and 3 of her neighbors. As a first time endeavor, Corvallis Evening Garden Club will collaborate with Mary's River Quilt Guild in making this a community event and bringing together volunteers with the like interest of garden enjoyment. Two club members from CEGC are serving on the Steering Committee to discuss the various tasks, logistics, and time-line to make this a success for both organizations.

The expertise of many of EGC's members would be well utilized with EGC's member's presence in each chosen garden on the day of the tour, sharing their plant and garden knowledge with visitors. This would involve the garden volunteers meeting briefly with homeowners prior to the event to learn about their specific garden design, plant material, and any other garden related information.

Any advertising and media coverage, ticket sales, and promotion will also be collaborated to insure well diversified exposure to the public. MRQG will handle quilt hanging in the gardens, producing flyers, brochures, and tickets, making name-tags, communicating with homeowners, and other specific tasks. Committees will be formed later this year and hopefully members of both clubs will provide both ample and needed representation to accomplish their goals.

Thanking any and every one in advance for participating in and sharing their much appreciated commitment to QITG, 2022, and hopefully many future tours together!
